6:54: MISSION TIME CHECK: In El Salvador, the coffee and sugar cane harvests always endanger the end of the school year for children who want to complete their educations, because the more hands there are in the fields, the more money a family can make. Pray for families in El Salvador today that struggle to make over $100 per month...pray that they would find a way to allow their children to complete the school year that is about to end. Pray that families would see education as a part out of poverty, and not a deterrent to making money at harvest time. At the Love & Hope Children’s Home in Nejapa, El Salvador, the time is 5:55am ...in Cleveland, Ohio, the time is 6:55am...time for Moody Radio News with Gary Bittner...

Peyton Manning was the winning quarterback of Super Bowl XLI. It was a rainy night, and the ball was slippery. Rex Grossman, the quarterback for the losing team, fumbled several times. But Peyton Manning never fumbled. A few weeks after the Super Bowl a reporter discovered that during the year Manning has his center (the one who snaps him the ball), Jeff Saturday, snap him water-soaked footballs. He practices handling wet footballs so he will be ready in case it rains—even though his team plays half of their games in a dome. Manning did what he could do (practice handling wet footballs over and over) to enable him to do what he could not do without this preparation (play great in the rain).
